Zuma's exposed crown jewels disgusts CDP

“The Christian Democratic Party (CDP) is disgusted by the controversial painting of Pres. Jacob Zuma displaying his crown jewels. We find this in very bad taste, to say the least,” says CDP leader, Rev. Theunis Botha.

“We also find it necessary to again call on Zuma to get his moral house in order. As an active politician and President of South Africa, he cannot expect to be insulated from being parodied for his extra-marital antics, even in a secular state with a secular constitution. We feel, however, that the line has been crossed this time.

“One should also not lose sight of the fact that South Africa is a pluralistic country where actions against an individual can easily be perceived as being an attack by one group on another.

“Escalating polarisation is not in anyone’s interest.”

Zuma se ontblote kroonjuwele walg CDP

“Die Christen-Demokratiese Party (CDP) is gewalg deur die omstrede skildery waarop pres. Jacob Zuma sy kroonjuwele ten toon stel. Ons vind dit, om die minste te sê, in swak smaak,” sê ds. Theunis Botha, leier van die CDP.

“Ons vind dit egter ook nodig om weer eens ‘n beroep op Zuma te doen om sy morele huis agtermekaar te kry. As ‘n aktiewe politikus en President van Suid Afrika kan Zuma nie verwag om geïnsuleer te wees van parodiese voorstellings van sy buite-egtelike manewales nie. Selfs nie in ‘n sekulêre staat met ‘n sekulêre grondwet nie, maar ons meen nou is die perke oorskry.

“‘n Mens moet ook nie uit die oog verloor nie dat Suid-Afrika ‘n plurale land is waar die aksies teen ‘n individu maklik as ‘n aanval teen ‘n groep beskou word.

“Om polarisasie aan te blaas is in niemand se belang nie.”
